

Hoke's Division held its position at Sugar Loaf while A. H. Terry's Federal infantry marched down the peninsula. Terry's men erected a strong defensive line across Federal Point from Battery Anderson to the Cape Fear River.

Bragg ordered a tentative advance on Terry's force to the south, but soon reached the conclusion that Hoke lacked sufficient force to take the position. Hoke retreated to Sugar Loaf.

Terry was now confident that his northern line would sufficiently protect the Federal columns of Ames' division as they attacked Fort Fisher.

- █ Federal Infantry
- █ Hoke's Confederate Division

BRAGG

HOKE

Sugar Loaf

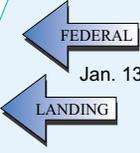

Burriss

Pond

Wilmington

Myrtle Sound

Battery Gatlin

In the face of Hoke's Division, some 6,400 strong, Terry's 9,000-man Provisional Corps advances southward.

Union Northern Line begun January 14.

PAINE

Abbott

Battery Anderson
("Flag Pond Battery")

AMES

FEDERAL POINT

Atlantic Ocean

Steam transport Isaac Wells sunk by Confederate gunboat Chickamauga to prevent its capture by Federal troops.

Craig's Wharf

TERRY

Union Fleet arrives off Fort Fisher from the port of Beaufort, NC.

HOWARD'S HILL

Battery Holland

FEDERAL IRONCLADS

Wharf

Lamb

Fort Fisher

Battery Buchanan

Mound Battery

New Inlet

The Opposing Lines on Federal Point

January 14, 1865